Study Shows That CIW Residents Ingest Ten Grams of Lead Paint Monthly

By Madison Cardiel

College in the Woods is not only one of Binghamton’s oldest residential communities, but also its most lead-paint coated. This is already a well-known fact, as one CIW student has stated, “Yeah. We know it sucks. People like to tell us that, as if we don’t already live here.” However, the extent of the lead paint amount in the dorms was not confirmed until a recent study that demonstrated the varying amounts of lead paint inhaled and ingested by CIW students each month. According to researchers, the average CIW resident will ingest ten grams of lead paint every month. This amount varies slightly between each building, with Oneida students consuming significantly more paint chips than Mohawk residents. We interviewed a freshman from

Oneida who commented, “Mmm. Yummy paint chips. Sweet treats.” One critique of the study posits that its numbers are skewed. In fact, it is likely that the average CIW resident only eats about half a gram of lead paint chips per month. Lawrence “Lead Paint Larry” Johnson, who resides in Seneca, consumes over 50 grams of lead paint every month and is an outlier who should not be counted. In critique of the critique, CIW students have banded together to proclaim that their residential community just wouldn’t be the same without Lead Paint Larry. Thus, he needs to be included in all future research of the dietary habits of College in the Woods.

Not Just a Theory: MatPat Found Dead in Miami

By Yuri Mumm

Miami-Dade County, Florida— Authorities confirmed the identity of a shooting victim in Miami yesterday as Matthew Robert Patrick, better known as Youtuber and actor MatPat. MatPat's unfortunate demise comes just days after he announced his departure from running his YouTube channels, breaking the hearts of tens of thousands of devoted fans, as well as mildly bumming out millions of occasional viewers. Miami-Dade Police have reported that the suspect in custody is Mark Edward Fischbach, a fellow Youtuber and actor better known as Markiplier. "It was crazy," says eyewitness Margaret Fryer. "He was ranting about how MatPat's new 'Poker Man' or whatever you call them, wasn't sexy enough for his tastes, before he pulled out a gun and started blasting. Then he yelled out, 'Was that the Shooting of '24!?!' and ran away." Matthew leaves behind a wife and son, who have declined to comment for this report. However, his estate has put out a statement that reads, "while we cannot get into specifics, we are in talks with CEC Entertainment Incorporated for a very special burial." Regardless of whatever Charles Entertainment Mouse has planned for the funeral arrangements, one can imagine it will pay tribute to MatPat's numerous achievements, from making a group of highly successful YouTube channels, to playing a role in the hit blockbuster film Five Nights at Freddy's, to that time that he gave a copy of Undertale to Pope Francis (seriously, look it up).

George Santos Caught Being a Naughty Little Boy (Never Before Seen Coverage!)

By Andrew Schiller

Fellas, there's just no way around it. We all like to have a little "fun" sometimes, but no matter what, it requires making do with whatever you have at your disposal. Unless, of course, you're NY-3's former representative George Santos. Santos has previously graced the public eye on account of lying about his entire resumé, but despite all his little fibs and white lies, he never felt the big boot of reality collide with his falsely Brazilian bottom. So why is today so different? You'd better buckle up, because let's just say that the scourge of Long Island certainly buckled down if you catch my drift. $240,000. To you, that might be a small (or large) fortune, but for old Georgie, it was nothing but chump change. He couldn't care less if it was from his campaign fund – he still used it to have a good time. At press time, the expense that has become most infamous is something that I like to call "Santos' OnlyFans Escapade." That's right, even such a venerated politician couldn't resist the sweet temptations of feet, goth models, and whatever else they have on there. I guess they call him "Santoes" for a reason. One of George's wild nights didn't even stop online. Not many news outlets know this, but the BUTT managed to secure a synopsis of Santos' night with OnlyFans creator EatMyPussy226. George took his newfound darling to Las Vegas, a more commonly known expense, to have an Italian-themed getaway. No, it wasn't his honeymoon. Mrs. Santos has gone on record saying, "Yeah, I don't know where the fuck he was." Santos and Pussy stayed at the famous Venetian resort, where he bought expensive Italian and other foreign clothing and took Pussy on a gondola ride. Their gondolier, Anita Rimagiobbo, especially remembered one of George's remarks to Pussy: "Heh, the grand canal might be great, but wait until you see my leaning tower!" And, according to our sources, it was leaning indeed. George, you dirty dog! I guess Pussy was one of the last model he subscribed to. George's stolen spending spree didn't stop at vacations, clothes, and hotties. He also used the money to work on himself. Yes, you heard me correctly. I mean, what else would you use Botox for? He and Pussy shopped at Sephora and had some spa days. Santos seemed proud of it too, going so far as to allot a total of $2,900 to "Botox" on his spreadsheets. He also made a remark about it during his... intimate moment with Pussy, saying that "The Botox that I bought is nice, but I'd like to see your Botox right now, or kitten won't be getting a tip."

Maybe Curious George could spend a little bit of the money on varying the structure of his innuendos. At the end of the day (or night, in his case), while Santos' job may be San-toast, I wouldn't feel too bad for him. Somehow, I feel like things are going to work out just fine for the Long Islander with an eye for the finer things in life. Although his wife did leave him, so... Those reading may be confused, since George is a gay icon every Republican strives to be; Pussy's exact identity is uncertain as our sources state that they were always conveniently just out of their line of sight in increasingly elaborate ways. Whatever the case may be, the truth is, Santos is just not straight with the people or in general.

WOMEN BEWARE! The East Gym Experiences 1920s Time Warp Following Discovery of Disease

By Dorothy Fitzgerald

As Binghamton University is finally coming out of its Malevian time warp, one part of campus seems to stay the same; the East Gym is unfortunately still stuck in the 1920s due to lack of funding. The 1920s gym includes dirt roads (modern day treadmill), child workers (to lift the weights for you), and most importantly: a dress code that only applies to women! Unfortunately in this time period, women are not allowed to show their torso (especially their lower back). Breaking this rule in the East Gym could result in being forcibly covered up (with a modern day-bright green pinny) and being excommunicated from the building. Kindly, they do not throw you in jail or tell your husband so he can beat you! The reason for this dress code coming from the newspaper (website but that doesn't exist yet) is that this dress code prevents diseases that spread through sweat. Finally, a cure from the plague! Although they do not enforce wiping down the machines (with this new invention called "clean water" and "soap"), they do think that women covering their bodies will stop diseases, because obviously all diseases are caused by women. Well, they aren't this outright sexist about it; they do have a few signs that say men can't wear a tank top. In law, it's equal! In practice, women are the only ones who are handed these ugly green pinnies. Just the other day Helen Keller herself visited the East Gym. In an exclusive interview with her she recapped her experience; "Well I was trying to just run on my dirt road (modern-day treadmill) and the child worker told me my back was 'too exposed.' I questioned him, saying I can't even see or hear but he slapped my face to make me understand! My question is, how is my sweat spreading diseases on a dirt road (treadmill) when my sweat would drip onto the ground and people now wear shoes on it. Waterrrrrrrr." Binghamton University is currently working to solve the time warp issue. Until then, if you do plan to work out and you are a woman, make sure to wear your most uncomfortable and covering attire. Some recommendations for gym attire from the Virgin Mary herself include...

- Nun Robes
- Turtleneck
- Suit and Tie
- Fur Coat

Now 100% tax free in the state of Mississippi!

Great deals you'll love.

Workplace environments comparable to textile mills.

If these options seem uncomfortable to you (which they are), you are out of luck! If you aren't a man, you should at least be dressing like one! Hopefully this issue will be resolved soon but until then, Happy 1920s everyone! The Great Depression (midterm season) is coming soon!

Golly Gee Gumdrops!!

I'd sure love to spill enemy blood into the sea! But would they really let in a little ole' ditz like me?

Yes Ma'am!

Just outside the time warp, you can slay the day away today!

Beheading Video Circulates Around Campus Following Oneida Laundry Incident

By Yuri Mumm

In a spectacle not seen since the early 2000s, a video of a person getting fucking decapitated has been spread through social media recently. What precisely was the cause of this bloodbath? It's simple: laundry. In line with what seems to be a common theme these days, CIW is at the heart of the issue. Following the Alpaca Incident two weeks ago, it was discovered that alpaca spit could be washed off in the campus laundromats. This caused a tsunami of students to rush for their respective dorm laundry centers, where orderly and polite cleansing of clothing occurred... with the specific exception of Oneida. Angry and inexperienced with taking care of themselves, the freshmen struggled amongst themselves for the right to wash their grubby, odorous linens. Angry messages and hate mail soon filled the Oneida GroupMe, with messages from users such as Vincent Ofedunge, who wrote "Youre clothes are done u stupid assholes i hate u and myself and fuck u [sic]." Vitriol and degeneracy has continued to reign in regards to the laundry situation, with innocents reporting stolen tide pods, burgled straight from the machine mid-wash, all to fill the thieves desperate addiction to consuming the product. This finally culminated when one freshman, visibly soiled and red-faced, found that every single machine in Oneida was done, and full of clothing. In a violent rage, the prospective mechanical engineering major took out their latest homework assignment: a DIY guillotine. In a display akin to the French people's finest moment, another freshman, eyes glued to their phone, was subsequently killed by the blade. Their friend, Barbara Rickseen, described the scene as follows. "It was horrible, like one of those soap cutting videos on TikTok gone wrong. One moment, he was standing, the next, the room was awash with blood." Thankfully, the perpetrator is behind bars, but the anger and fury still fills Oneida's halls, and this reporter fears that this cycle of violence will continue. Whatever happens, rest assured that this correspondent will continue to apply journalistic integrity and dry(er) wit to this developing story.

Is Your Meal Plan Running Low? Do This!

By David Belkin

As the semester nears a midpoint after what felt like several weeks, many students report that they are struggling to afford dining hall food with the money they have left in their meal plan. Evidently, Binghamton University has recently been scrambling to circumvent the lower customer-base dining halls have been seeing. Dining hall employees have been leaving freshly cooked meals outside the windows of all dorm rooms so that the smell wafts inside as instructed by Binghamton Health Services to do so. Baxter Bearcat has also reportedly been approaching students outside Bartle and asking them questions like: "Aren't you hungry," "Don't you want to eat," and "Should I be concerned?" Nevertheless, many students are trying to frequent the dining hall less. But what Binghamton's academic body doesn't realize is that there's no need to starve yourself during midterms week: there's a simple way to increase the money in your dining hall plan so you can afford to buy however much food you need. Here's what you do. Go on to your computer and access <https://bing.campuscardcenter.com/ch/login.html> and put in your credentials. Put a specified amount of money (Harvey Stenger has gone on record as recommending this amount of money be "at least 500 dollars worth or more") into your meal plan account using your or more likely your parents' credit card. Afterward, you will have more money in your meal plan and can finally eat a hot, cooked meal! Say hi to Mein Bowl Mary for me. Binghamton Health Services representative P. Sandcorn is a big advocate for students adding money to their meal plans. "Just because you put money into your account doesn't mean that you're locked into using that money to buy food," they said before adding: "We get paid either way." At press time, Binghamton Health Services released a statement expressing worry over having to get rid of large amounts of unsold food, saying: "If no one wants to eat all of this delicious food, we'll throw it right in the trash. Seriously, you don't want to test us. If you don't eat this food by the end of the semester, no one will. We're serious."

Featuring advice columns and listicles... What, you got something you wanna say, punk?

Dear David

Pipe Dream has recently released an advice column called 'Dear Doris' enabling everyday college students to reach out to a writer that they have never met and receive one to two paragraphs' worth of mildly helpful tips. In order to stay relevant, the Binghamton University Times Tribune has created its own, rival advice column called Dear David. Columnist David Belkin is a distinguished writer whose English professor had once described him as "the loudest chewer in any lecture hall." Several students and faculty have already sent David letters asking for all kinds of advice.

Dear David: How do I find I job? I tried asking Doris at Pipe Dream, but then I remembered that Doris writes for Pipe Dream. Any real advice?

Signed, Hireable

Dear Hireable,

As far as I am concerned, you and everyone else in the job market are my competition. I cannot in all good conscious advise you in this area. Once I find steady work, we can revisit this.

Best,
David

Dear David: I am a freshman who selected his roommate randomly on the housing portal. He and I haven't gotten along even once in the five months we have lived together. When I hear his footsteps from down the hall, I become filled with dread. I am considering moving out. What do you think?

Signed,
Residential Struggling

Dear Residential Struggling,

Five months is not enough time to determine whether you roommate is a good fit for you. Give it a year and then reconsider.

Best,
David

Dear David: My friends all want to go to a bar this weekend. But I am only nineteen, so I bought a fake ID. Will I get caught?

Signed, Underaged

Dear Underaged,

Turning away potential customers based on factors such as age or legality is not a good business practice, and most college bars understand this. Find another student whose shoulders you can climb on and a very large trench coat for you both to wear, and you both should be fine.

Have a safe weekend,
David

Dear David: I am starting to believe more and more in the male loneliness epidemic. It is harder than ever for me to build male friendships. I am doing everything I can— I go to clubs, I talk to people in my classes, I message people on Reddit— but nothing seems to come of it. Our generation seems entirely uninterested in and in some cases even adverse to male bonding, and this phenomenon is only becoming more and more prevalent as male friendships continue to decline. What do you think can be done to encourage more friendships between men in our generation before we all become completely isolated?

Signed,
Lonely

Dear Lonely,

Which Are the Best Paint Flavors to Enjoy as a Nice Snack? (RIP Grandpa)

By Andrew Schiller

Readers, for once, I have to be honest with you: I would not consider paint my first choice of snack. I don't want to be presumptuous, but I don't think many of you would either. I can't, however, say that for one Bobby Stein. Stein received the epithet "Paint Grandpa" in February 2019 when he ate paint thinking it was yogurt. He went on to become an internet sensation and a leave a permanent mark on internet history. Just this June, Stein passed away from unrelated causes. This was a sad death for many, but can we just step back for a second? Obviously, Stein tasted the paint and thought, "Wow, this is some good yogurt. I'm going to keep eating it." It really makes you think. Whatever the case, to celebrate Stein's life and legacy, the BUTT will be publishing several paint-themed articles. Today, I'll be telling you the flavors of paint that you should be gunning for if, like Stein, you're hankering for a refreshing and highly viscous liquid to eat. I'll be going from worst to best, so grab a screwdriver and a spoon and strap in.

10. Green: Green is the color of vegetables, and vegetables are yucky. My mommy tells me that I should be eating them, but they're yucky. Green paint reminds me of vegetables, so it's yucky by extension.

9. Brown: Brown is the color of poop. Poop is also yucky, but unlike vegetables, poop is funny. I like to make funny jokes about poopy and Skibidi Toilet. That's the only reason why brown paint is better than green paint.

8. Black: Sorry, my son got ahold of my keyboard for a bit. Anyway, black is just a very boring flavor. It's commonly associated with death, and if there's anything I don't want to be doing while eating paint, it's dying. This is also the flavor that is most likely to stain your teeth. Don't test that. Please.

7. Purple: While it's one of the more exotic flavors of paint, purple paint just isn't very good. While it's not the war crime that is green paint, purple paint is linked to eggplant, beets, and other vegetables and produce. Not terrible, but it's the best bad flavor of paint.

6. White: White is the first flavor of paint that isn't bad. Like black paint, it has a very neutral flavor, but it is more appetizing because of how similar it looks to milk, rice, coconut, and, of course, yogurt.

5 and 4. Orange and Yellow: It's a tie! If you only have orange and yellow paint to choose between, it's honestly up to personal preference. They are similar in taste, but they each have their own distinct hints of different foods. Orange is slightly more acidic because it reminds the eater of such fruits as orange, mango, and papaya. Yellow paint, on the other hand, is slightly more savory as it mostly resembles a cheesy substance. You can't go wrong with either one.

3. Red: Finally, some good fucking food. Red paint is associated with a plethora of delicious and nutritious foods, such as strawberries, tomatoes, apples, raspberries, and cherries. Being compared to so many different types of fruits, red paint has a refreshing and sweet taste in the mouth.

2. Blue: While blue, like purple, is an exotic flavor of paint, it pulls its weight and more by not being a very naturally occurring color in foodstuffs. Even the blueberry, whose name is derived from the same root as blue paint, is purple when you open it and green when you peel it. Because you can't compare blue paint to anything, and because it is such an appealing color, it is incredibly popular among the paint-eating community.

1. Pink: I'm a Barbie girl, in the Barbie world! Life in plastic, it's fantastic! You can brush my hair, undress me everywhere... Imagination, life is your creation! I'm a blonde bimbo girl in a fantasy world - dress me up, make it tight, I'm your dolly! You're my doll, rock'n'roll, feel the glamour in pink. Kiss me here, touch me there, hanky-panky! You can touch! You can play! If you say: "I'm always yours" (ooh, oh)...

WHAT STINKS ABOUT THE BUTT

Write this down with a scented pen, it will be on the midterm later

We Pried the BUTT Open to Figure Out What Exactly Goes on in Their Freakish Little Lives for You to Enjoy...

Maxwell Andrew Maceluch— Maxwell Andrew Maceluch is a senior attending the Public Ivy that is Binghamton University, commonly known as SUNY Harvard among esteemed circles. Minor in education and major in English with a creative writing concentration - could you imagine - he is our wonderful publication's absolute supreme leader who rules with a noun adjunct noun. The terrifying world of "regents" left this Connecticut-born scholar dazed and confused until the BUTT spread itself wide open to shed light upon his ghastly form, thus setting him upon the glorious path of unethical journalism. Rumor has it he enjoys jokes too, especially funnies.

David Belkin— David Belkin is a senior attending Binghamton University. In his final year attending Binghamton, he has risen to the esteemed yet low-commitment position of BUTT Vice President. He majors in English and plans on using his degree to write several unpopular short-stories before settling on enrollment to law school. His high school yearbook voted him most likely to "use this tired, old gag in a fictitious biography of himself." David is also known for getting a parking spot in the lot across from the Union earlier this semester, and he hopes that such good luck will come his way again before he graduates. His favorite article he's ever written for the paper is "FACT: Residential Assistants are Obsolete."

Elana Greim— Elana is a sophomore who doesn't write any articles because she's too lazy. She is also secretary of the BUTT. She is among the first ever women members of the BUTT. Elana's likes include money, coins, change, bills, and stacks. She is always looking out for the opps.

Gressa Blomquist— Gressa Blomquist is a sophomore at Binghamton University (duh). She is a bio major and can't write for shit. She supposedly has been working on an article for 2 years. She would write more but she has a test tomorrow.

Yuri Mumm— Yuri Mumm was born in 1898 in Finland. After serving in the First World War, he went into the incredibly competitive earwax removal industry, but was forced out because he was too cool for his competition (was arrested for arson). After a mandatory stay in a very strange hotel (prison), Yuri wandered across America, becoming the origin of 3 ½ urban legends. He wandered into the BUTT one day, and we can't make him leave. As of now, he has no major, money, or sense of dignity. His future plans include crime, heinous acts, and taking up knitting.

Madison Cardiel— Madison is a freshman at Binghamton University who is majoring in anthropology, which she claims makes her a woman in STEM, but doesn't really. Madison has lived in a heinous amount of places, so never ask her where she's from or her head will explode. Her hobbies include drawing, writing, and getting terrible haircuts. She hopes that, after she graduates from university, she can go and dig up funny caveman bones and live in the woods.

Gabriela Cafaro— Gabriela Cafaro is a sophomore at Binghamton University who enjoys long walks on the beach and short sprints to the shuttle. She is currently an English major with a writing concentration and hopes to one day write a best seller called "Mr Beast: Is He Taking It Too Far?" Her sun sign is in Leo and her moon is in Aries so you know she has a few screws loose! Her favorite pastimes include fucking bitches and getting money.

Andrew Schiller— Andrew Schiller is a freshman at Binghamton University. He wants to major in Creative Writing and PPL. He was only kind of interested in writing for the BUTT at first, but his friend Genevieve really wanted to go, so he did too. He's a taurus and his social security number is 554 62... oh wait, he just got told that he shouldn't tell you that. Outside of the BUTT, Andrew is a member of Pokémon Club, Cheese Club, and Kaskeset A Cappella. He enjoys acting, singing, writing, going on walks, and playing video games. He also wants to let you know that you matter and that the people who know you are lucky. Finally, he hopes that you have a nice day.

Genevieve Rolnick— Genevieveve Rolnick is a sophomore at Binghamton University majoring in English. She is loquacious and a sesquipidalean (Read: Fucking nerd). Genevieveveve bugged her friend Andrew Schiller to join this club because she didn't want to go alone and now she's pretty sure he's better than she is. Her star sign is a Capri Sun, with Aquarium rising and Quesadilla moon. Outside of the BUTT, Genevieveveve is a member of Taiko, and that's it. She is wanted in 4 US states for tax evasion and potentially murder but they never found the body. Finally, Genevieveveveve would like you to know that Vapoleon-

Calvin Matthes— Calvin is freshman at Binghamton University majoring in PPL purely because It piques the least curiosity in the family and has no math requirement. Technically didn't qualify to graduate from high school. Enjoys playing basketball, video games, drawing and schizo watching. Dream job is to be an overeducated government worker of some sorts. Go Knicks and play Disco Elysium.

Mieraan— Famously goes by M, a Senior who transferred to Bingbong from the suburbs of Rockland County after spending his Freshmen and Sophomore years in Covid University and is surprised by the lack of Porsches in this region of New York. He studies Management Info Systems because he's South Asian, and that means he's also stereotypically going into IT. His zodiac sign is Saggytitsanus. His hobbies include living, breathing, eating, sleeping, and existing. He is THE Cheese Messenger, so please be advised to not shoot him.

Summer Rice— Summer is a freshman at Binghamton University who cannot manage her money and does not know where a single thing is on campus. She wants to major in Environmental Science, but that is merely because every other option seems like too much work. Summer joined BUTT after receiving a text message from Elana Griem stating, "Butt?!", confused but intrigued, she decided to start attending the meetings. She has only written a single article but that is because she is constantly writing papers for her WRIT 111 class. Summer's passions include spending money, calling her mom 10x a day, and ordering insomnia cookies.

Emily Newman— Emily is a reclusive senior majoring in English and creative writing. She spends her days getting work out of the way so she can focus on the more important things like eating and gaming.

Makaela Volna— Hey BUTT lovers! My name is Makaela and I am the self-proclaimed social chair of the BUTT. You've probably read my articles [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. Oh wait. I've never actually published anything for the BUTT. My days consist of making random pitches with Gressa and Gabby and saying "I'm going to make this into an article", but end up abandoning the idea. Hey! Just like my mom did with me! Anyways, as social chair I'm currently working towards getting the BUTT a Lume sponsorship. Then maybe, just maybe, the BUTT won't stink.

... And you! Just kidding. We have other members too. You can join them. You don't have to though. Unless you want to. We'd appreciate if you did, especially if you're a graphic designer.
